Federal public law 107-110, section 9528 of the ESEA, or "No Child Left Behind" Act, requires school districts to release names, addresses, and phone numbers of graduating students to military recruiters upon their request. Recruiters then call students at home and provide information regarding military enlistment. The law also requires the school district to notify graduating students of their right to opt-out. Graduating students may request that the district withhold their information from military recruiters by completing this form. If GLC does not receive this information, the student's information may be given out at any time.
